Introduction

As an asynchronous event-driven JavaScript runtime Environment, In 2009, Ryan Dahl designed Node.js to build scalable network applications. Upon each connection, the callback is fired, but if there is no work to be done, Node.js will sleep. Thread-based networking is relatively inefficient and very difficult to use. Furthermore, users of Node.js are free from worries of dead-locking the process, since there are no locks. Almost no function in Node.js directly performs I/O, so the process never blocks except when the I/O is performed using synchronous methods of Node.js standard library. Because nothing blocks, scalable systems are very reasonable to develop in Node.js. HTTP is a first-class citizen in Node.js, designed with streaming and low latency in mind. This makes Node.js well suited for the foundation of a web library or framework. Node.js being designed without threads doesn't mean you can't take advantage of multiple cores in your environment.

Handlebars is a templating engine similar to the ejs module in node.js, but more powerful and simple to use. It ensures minimum templating and is a logicless engine that keeps the view and the code separated. Handlebars templates look like regular text with embedded Handlebars expressions.

Express is a minimal and flexible Node.js web application framework that provides a robust set of features for web and mobile applications. It is light-weight web application framework to help organize your web application into an MVC architecture on the server side.

MongoDB's document model is simple for developers to learn and use, while still providing all the capabilities needed to meet the most complex requirements at any scale. It is a NoSQL which is used as an alternative to traditional relational databases. NoSQL databases are quite useful for working with large sets of distributed data. MongoDB is a tool that can manage document-oriented information, store or retrieve information.

Introduction To Project

(User Management System)

Food Ordering Application is used to manage all the activity related to online ordering of food and its niche methodologies. In this Application, I have provided all kind of module and functionality simultaneously to make interactive yet responsive website at with the use of Node.Js, Express, MongoDB and Handlebars. I am also using stripe key for payment gateway. To make a full-fledged website having both front-end and back-end put together to cater user request. The website will have registration page, login page, home page, profile page and various other page like checkout and payment page to perform all action as per user needs. All of it with proper validation/authentication and being connected to the database using MongoDB.

Objectives

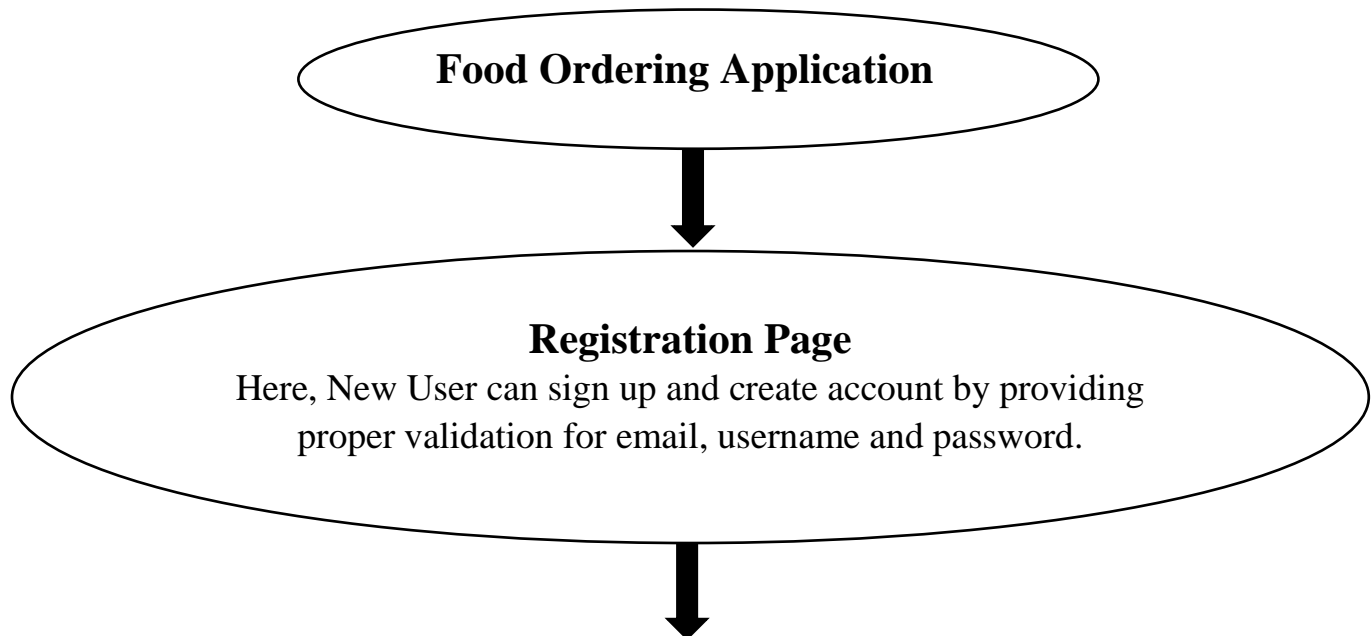

The objective of Food Ordering Application is to innovate a place for online food ordering at ease. The main purpose is to shape an application which is unique and meets the user constraints. The innovation and technologies will amplify the user frequency. This will add intensity and would understand tenacity to my application. The modularity and functionality will have easier ways to navigate and make the user feel insightful.

Theory

Food Ordering Application is going to have registration page where new user can sign up and create account by providing proper validation for email, username and password. After this, User can redirected to Log In Page, Where he provides same credentials which he had used during registration which Email ID and Password which will be matched from MongoDB database. Once he has performed log in, He will be taken to home page where User name is displayed with various modules like profile page, add to cart, and payment page to order a food item. In the payment page, I am using Payment Gateway API having a stripe key to keep track on payment once the food item is ordered and update the order details on Profile Page. Therefore, User can explore the various modules of the website and perform log out any time during the entire session.

Modules

Login Page

In this, User can redirected to Log In Page, Where he provides same credentials which he had used during registration which username and password which will matched from MongoDB database.

Home Page

Once, He has performed log in, He will be taken to home page where Username is displayed. In this, All the food items are displayed and can be added to cart as per the need.

Profile Page

In this, User Details are displayed. Even, His/Her Order Details are displayed with the proper alignment layout.

Check Out Page

In this, User can check out with his/her ordered food items and can also reduce the number of food items added to the cart.

Payment Page

Here, User can pay for his/her ordered food items through payment gateway for card payment.

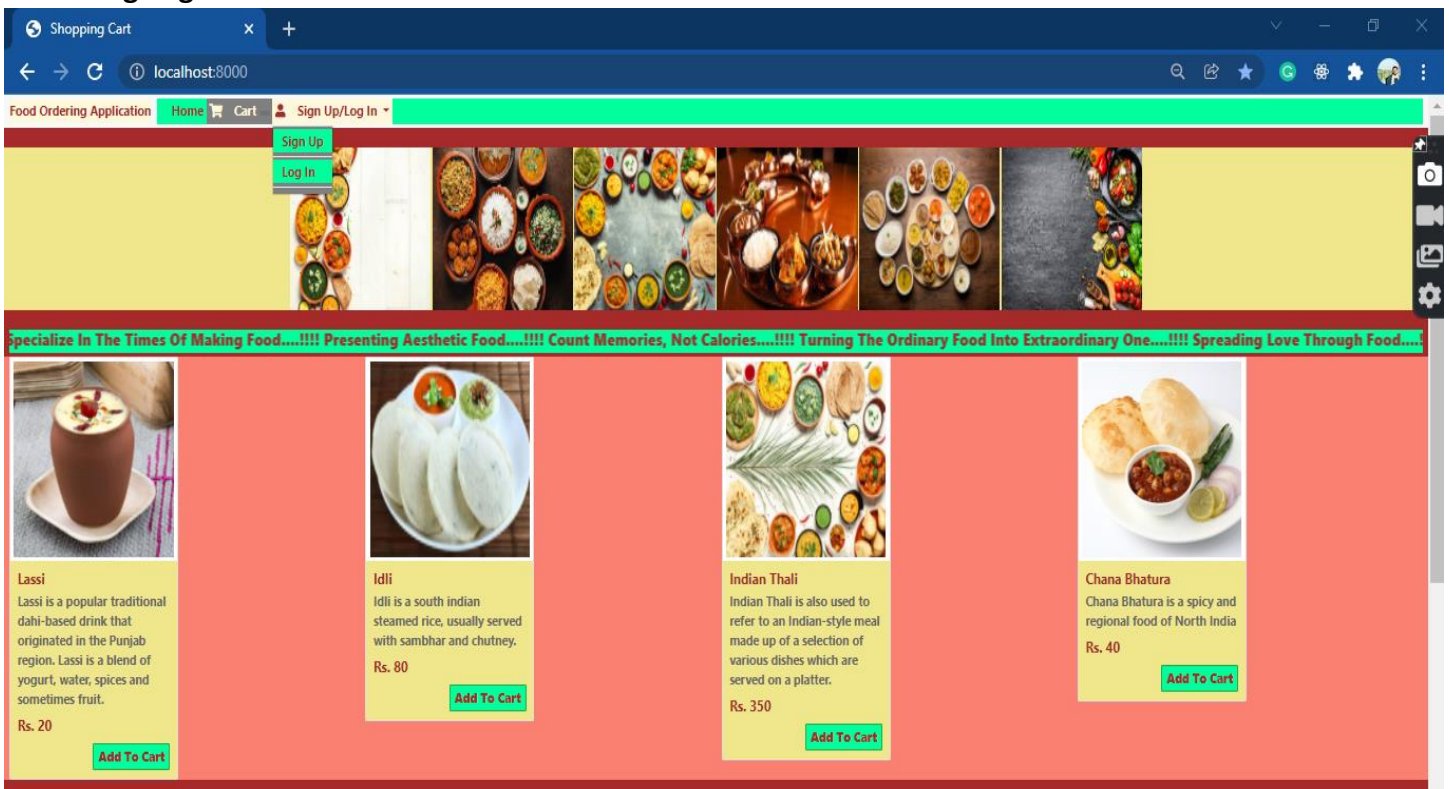

Log Out Page

At last, User can explore with various modules of the application and perform log out any time during the entire session.
